When Was the Iron Age?

The Iron Age in Britain continued until the Roman invasion of AD 43. This period of time followed the Bronze Age, and by 500 BC, iron had replaced bronze as the chosen metal for making weapons and tools.

Although the Iron Age didn't properly begin in Europe until the 8th century BC, the Hittites of Anatolia (part of modern day Turkey) are thought to have used the first iron in the 14th century BC. This was followed by places such as ancient India and ancient Greece in the 12th century BC.
